Construction Update:

The improved sports center will consist of three new recreational courts – one multi-purpose court, one tennis court, and a synthetic grass court. Suspended recreational track (3 lanes, one-mile of track); an aerobics and dance studio; a lobby café and social gathering space; batting/ golf cage, 11,900 square feet of strength, cardiac, and fitness spaces; recreational locker rooms for students, faculty, and staff; ADA-compliant public restrooms; relocated and expanded athletic training space, and relocated offices. The center is expected to be completed in the spring of 2010.

Removal requires maintaining a cumulative GPA above 2.5 over freshman year and 2.75 for the following years.

According to Motzer, despite the difference in evaluations of local and out-of-state students, there exists “equality between in-state and out-of-state opportunities” for financial aid. The high standards expected from the incoming local students should, theoretically ensure that they perform their best, which guarantees them full financial aid.

Moreover, both residential and out-of-state students are eligible for the Forester Scholarships in addition to the In-State and Presidential Scholarship. Forester Scholarships emphasize various fields such as art, theater, music, and academics. Students with highly exceptional interests and talents, both in-state and out-of-state are encouraged to pursue these scholarships without the necessity of majoring in any particular field of study.

A total of $20,000 in annual financial aid is entirely merit-based and need-blind.

A student can be granted a total of one academic and one Forester scholarship, confirmed Cebrzynski.

The incoming class of 2014 will be the first to this new policy, courtesy of LFC's Scholarship and Financial Aid Budget, which provides all the scholarship funds for foresters.

“Money which was previously utilized to execute other scholarships is now condensed to provide simplicity and enhance the current sum of $12,000 per year,” Motzer explained.

Being conscious of the costs around you, and the costs that fall on you is part of being not only a member of our college, but also a member of our economic system.

This is a system that is often unappreciated, yet environmentally flawed and abusive that should be addressed eventually. In this economy, you have limited choices, and everyone is conscious of this. The problem is that you can't hide from the costs that are being passed on to you. The economic system is a system that is run on you is part of being not only a member of our college, but also a member of our economic system. Hardly ever before, have we been conscious about the adequate, responsible, baseline amount of electricity.

What I do know, is that issues such as these need to be addressed, so that we begin to cost ourselves more money than we expected. Whether you are a green activist or a shrewd economist, and those not interested in alleviating the current baseline, you are part of the costing of electricity.

This year probably will be compared to other seasons, that is how much electricity is being used. As a college student, you are part of the team that is responsible for any change in the system. Freshman orientation proves to be “innovative and creative” in 2009

By Madeeha Khan

Candace Greytak, a resident of South Campus, enjoyed the tour, saying, “It was a great way to get acquainted with other people on South Campus, and with the atmosphere that was there.” Colin MacFarlane, Residence Director of South Campus, agrees. MacFarlane helped organize the tours, and expressed desire to incorporate the remaining upperclassmen more into the orientation programs. “Orientation was, on the whole, successful,” MacFarlane said. MacFarlane’s feelings seem to be prevalent; though the surveys are still being processed, this year’s program appeared overall successful. “Of course there are little things that need to be worked out,” Waugh said, when asked about any changes that would be made for next year’s program. Freshman, Jacob Alben stated that he had no least favorite part, and that, “everything we did was a success.”

Though orientation might have changed, its purpose has remained the same: to welcome new students to Lake Forest College. This year’s “orientation was fantastic,” Daggett said. Freshman get a chance to experience the college, both on- and according to Daggett, “students were engaged, energized and enthusiastic.” The programs might have changed, but the values they have remained the same, and Daggett hopes that the momentum will continue into the orientation next year.

With such a variety of programs, students had the opportunity to get to know one another. Many of the incoming freshmen enjoyed the new programs, with the low ropes course emerging as a common favorite. Commenting students seemed to like the low ropes course because, “it is the way of life for a lot of people.”

The entire program was rebuilt. “The most difficult part for me is actually the lack of sleep...”

Freshman, Jane Simpkins sentiment echoed Waugh’s thoughts when asked about helping students feel comfortable. According to Christopher Waugh, Assistant Dean for the Gates Center, Director of the Mohr Student Center, and one of the “masterminds” behind this year’s orientation, the new style was aimed to encourage group work. Waugh said that freshmen that it was not so much a focus on this year’s orientation, aimed to encourage group work.
